1 or 2 U.S. Jets Fell in N. Vietnam

By Craig R. Whitney

SAIGON, Dec. 22 (NYT).-The U.S. Command confirmed this morning that one and possibly two of the four Air Porce fighterbombers shot down or lost over the weekend crashed inside North Vietnam east of Hanol, while evading North Vietnamese MiG-21 fighters that had shot down another Air Force plane over

The command said that the unprecedented air-to-air combat between American and North Vietnamese planes over Laos began about 3 p.m. Saturday, when a supersonic F-4 Phantom that had been flying bombing missions for Lactian ground troops on the Plaine des Jarres "was engaged and presumably downed by an enemy MiG."

The command said: "One The plane crashed, but the Phantom reported he was heading towards the Gulf of Tonkin in an effort to reach open water before running out of fuel. The two crew members of this Phantom are listed as missing."

The North Vietnamese have said they have captured four American airmen-two of them in Hos Binh Province southwest of Hand, near the Lactian bor-der, and two others in Quang Ninh Province, east of Hand, and bordering the Gull of Tenkin,

The command said that the second F-4 also radiced that the crew was ejecting because of lack of fuel, and the two men were rescued from the mountainous jungle of Laos at 4 p.m. Sunday, one of them with a minor injury.

Ejected Over Laos

An informed American officer said yesterday that the plane had flown deep into North Vietnam north of Hanoi but, encountering heavy opposition from the MiGs. from ground fire, and from missiles, it circled around Hanoi and was streaking west again towards Laos when the crew ejected.

The fourth plane lost over the weekend was shot down by enemy anti-aircraft fire Sunday at 6 p.m., while it was supporting Lactian ground troops over the Plaine des Jarres. The crew was reported missing, the command

The MiG activity over Laos and the shooting down of at least the first plane by the Communist fighter was the first time in the Indochina war that such a cross border incident has been acknowledged.

Yesterday morning, the com-mand said, Air Force F-105 fighter-bombers operating over Laos fired missles at two Communist air defense radar sites in North Vietnam on the Laos-North Vietnam border, 95 and 103 miles northwest of Vinh, destroying one of the radar sites.

U.S. Affirms Devaluation Is Tied to EEC Accord

BRUSSELS, Dec. 22 (UPI).—William D. Eberle, President Nixon's special trade negotiator, reaffirmed today that short-term trade concessions by the European Common Market are a condition for devaluation of the dollar.

Ending his first round of talks with European Economic Com-munity representative Theodorus Hijzen, Mr. Eberle said the talks had gone as far as he might have expected. "This is not to say that we still have a long, tough negotiating road ahead of us," he said. Mr.

Eberle and Mr. Hijzen will meet again Jan. 14. A joint communique issued at the end of the talks said there had been an exchange of views on the trading concessions America demands and the reciprocal measures sought by the Common

Mr. Eberle, speaking to newsmen at the end of his two-day talks with Mr. Hijzen, recalled the closing communique of the Group of Ten meeting in Washington last weekend, which said devaluation of the dollar could be considered by the U.S. Congress "as soon as a related set of short-term trade measures is available for congressional scru-

Tonight's uproar betraved the deepening fatigue—both mental and physical—among the 1,008 senators, deputies and regional representatives who have been in the presidential conclave since Dec. 9. Apart from casting—or withholding-their ballots once twice a day, most of them also attend party caucuses and factional meetings that go on almost around the clock.

Until tonight, proceedings in the chamber hall had been fairly decorous although Communists and Christian Democrats had come to blows in a lobby earlier in the election. Today's incident was caused by mounting leftwing impatience with the Christian Democratic tactics of abstaining.

munity's calm assurance about the probable effects of the Washington monetary settlement on its internal policies was shaken today when France demanded an emergency Council of Ministers meeting because Italy refused to take part in a common border tax system on farm produce.

Under the EEC's common farmpricing policy, West Germany and the Benelux countries have been applying special border taxes since their currencies began floating. These taxes are designed to bring prices of imported agricultural goods up to the same level in terms of EEC currencies as they were before realignment. Similarly, export rebates are given to make EEC goods as competitive abroad as they were before.

After the new franc-dollar rate was established over the weekend, France served notice to the rest of the Common Market that it too wanted to apply a border tax, KEC sources said. But, they added. Italy declined to apply such a tax because of sagging business

First Measure on War Council Has Adopted

UN Supports

UNITED NATIONS, Dec. 22 (AP).-The Security Council adopted a resolution last night demanding that the India-Pakistan cease-fire "be strictly observed and remain in effect until withdrawals take place, as soon as possible."

The resolution was the first the council has managed to adopt in more than two weeks of intermittent meetings on the subject marked by the three Soviet vetoes. The vote on the compromise resolution was 13 to 0, with the Soviet Union and Poland abstaining. The sponsors were Argentina. Nicaragua, Burundi, Sierra Leone, Somalia and Japan.

The text had been negotiated painstakingly with India, Pakistan and their supporters on the council since East Pakistan was occupied by Indian forces last week and 14 days of fighting came to an end.

Somali Ambassador Abdulrahim Abby Farsh, speaking for the sponsors, said both parties to the conflict accepted all provisions of the resolution and will make any arrangements mutually agreeable 3 Soviet Vetoes

While the war raged, three Security Council attempts to pass cease-fire resolutions were irus-trated by Soviet vetoes. The resolution called on all UN members to avoid any action that might aggravate the situation and called on all concerned to take measures to preserve human life and observe the 1949 Geneva Conventions for the wartime protection of wounded and sick, prisoners of war and civilians.

It also called for international aid in the relief of suffering and for the safe return to their homes of the millions of East Pakistani refugees in India.

It authorized the UN secretarygeneral to "appoint, if necessary, special representative to lend his good offices for the solution of humanitarian problems."

It said nothing about a political settlement in East Pakistan, where India has placed a secessionist government in power under the flag of Bangladesh.

China Votes for Accord Huang Hua, of China, voted for the resolution, along with the majority, but he criticized it for including no reference to the "open aggression" of India. Pakistan's Ambassador Agha

Shahi called the resolution "weak." He said:
"The fact that the Security Council has at long last adopted a resolution on the situation in the subcontinent does not detract from the greater fact that the council failed signally in dealing with this situation according to the principles of the UN Charter,

'Pakistan was subjected to open and unconcealed aggression; tho council failed to prevent it. There the council failed to suppress it. A war engulfed the subcontinent; the council failed to put oot its flames. An untold number of lives was lost; the council did nothing to save them."

The words most often used to describe the 53-year-old Austrian -and they are often used together are "correct" and "diplomat." Even during his two years as Austria'e foreign minister, he has appeared to see his function as that of carrying out policy rather then making it.

This was eminently suitable for a country whose toreign policy is one of declared neutrality, of being everyone's friend but no one's enemy.

A Gentlemanly Campaign Even during his unsuccessful campaign for the Austrian presidency last year, running as the candidate of the conservative People's party, Mr. Waldheim adhered fairly closely to that principle. He ran a gentlemanly campaign, ending up with a substantial but losing 47 percent of the vote—and retained the respect of those in power, the Socialists, who returned him to the UN as their representative and backed his candidacy for the secretary-generalship. He himself says that his hobby is working, and acquaintances pressed for characteristic anec-dotes say that the fact that there are none is the most telling characteristic of the tall (6 feet 3 inches) and discreet career

His fellow-diplomats describe him as skillful and astute, but some express fears that he may not be the man the UN needs at a time when its prestige has faded. Few doubt his enormous capacity and will for hard work -one colleague says, "Everyono gets an occasional cold-Waldheim just swallows a pill or two and keeps going -- but do question whether he will imaginative and innovative.

The Status Que

Certainly much of his past career has appeared to follow the principlo that there is virtue in maintaining the status quo. But in Austria since World War IIhe joined the diplomatic service in 1945-that has required great skill at walking a tightrope be-tween East and West, the tra-ditional craft of Central European diplomats.

Born in St. Andrae-Woerden, a town in lower Austria not far from Vienna, on Dec. 21, 1918, Mr. Waldhelm was the son of a government-official. He graduated from the University of Vienna with a doctorate in law in 1944 after attending the diplomatic academy there from 1937 to 1939. His first assignment abroad was as first secretary in the embassy in Paris in 1948. He remained there until 1951, when he returned to Vienna to head the personnel division of the Foreign Ministry. He served in Canada, first as minister and then as ambassador, from 1956 to 1960. He was also appointed Austria's permanent observer at the UN in 1955 and headed his country's first delegation when Austria was admitted to membership in the same year.

Although Mr. Waldheim has been present as a member of Austria's delegation at every General Assembly session since then, he also headed the political affairs department in the Foreign Ministry from 1960 to 1964 and served his first tour as representative at the UN from 1965 to 1968, when he returned home once again to serve as foreign minister. Discreetly elegant in dress, with a generally soft-spoken manner that is said to conceal—entirely successfully—a capacity for tem-peramental severity, he was an active if unobtrusive lobbyist on his own behalf for the $62,500-ayear post he won yesterday. His English is described as excellent and his French as good, and he is said to be capable of demonstrating the storled Viennese charm. Welfare Stalled Welfare reform, which Mr. Nixon once listed at the top of his domestic priorities, has been stalled in the Senate Finance Committee since the House passed it early this year.

But Mr. MacGregor said the committee chairman, Sen. Russell B. Long, D., La., has given assurances that the bill will be moved out before March 1 for Senate action.

The provision for a federal guarantee of income for needy families may not be in the bill when the committee reports it. Mr. MacGregor acknowledged, but be indicated that the administra-tion is optimistic about the chances of restoring it on the Senate floor or in the House-Senate conference.

6 Firebases Captured An estimated 15.000 Communist

The foundry, one of six major components of the factory complex, will produce 530,000 tons of castings a year.

The design will be ready within a year, Swindell-Dressler officials said.
"It is a significant and impor-

Pravda Says China Gives U.S. Green Light on Indochina

By Hedrick Smith

Pravda, the Communist party newspaper, charged today that China had given the United States "a green light for the expansion of aggression in South Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia" hy bringing its foreign policy positions into line with Washington on several other issues.

"The signals from Peking show the ruling circles of the United States that they can go further with adventures in Indochina without fearing complications in relations with China," Pravda said in the most sweeping, hardhitting recent Soviet critique of Peking's policies.

As if to demonstrate that Moscow was not allowing its dealings with Washington to soften the Soviet stand on Vietnam, Premier Alexei N. Kosygin made an unusually sharp protest tonight against recent American air raids on North Vietnam.

At a banquet for a visiting Cuban delegation, he "wrathfully" condemned the "savage bombing" of North Vietnam a few days ago. Both the Prayda commentary and other articles appearing today were seen as an effort to discredit ticles have spoken tartly about collusion between Washington and Peking, today's Pravda commentary, written by Viktor Mayevsky, one of the paper's senior columnists, sought to document the case by a worldwide examination of China's policies.

Looking ahead to President Nixon's visit to Peking in February, Mr. Mayevsky highlighted Western press speculation that there might be a deal in which Washington would "find a form of recognition" of Chinese sover-eignty over Taiwan while "Peking would belp to 'pacify' Vietnam."

For the first time in recent months, Pravda denounced Premier Chou En-lai personally as one of the main instigators of the anti-India and anti-Soviet campaign" in Peking.

Until now, the Soviet press bad repeatedly denounced Mso Tse-tung and his "group," occasional-ly sniping at other aides of the aging Chinese leader but pointedly refraining from personal criticism of Mr. Chou.

That restraint h ulation among foreign observers that Moscow anticipated that Mr Chou might emerge after Mr. Mao's death as the dominant leader in Peking and, therefore, wanted to keep open the pos-sibility of reaching some accommodation with him,

But two articles in Pravda today indicated that the Kremlin had been stung by the premier's recent sharp comments opposing Soviet policies in the Indian subcontinent. The articles were taken as a reflection not only of Moscow's sharp irritation with Peking's line at the United Nations, but also of Soviet apprehensions about a stepped-up Chinese propaganda campaign among emerging countries upset by Moscow's backing of the Indian move into East

Ireland to Withdraw Troops From UN Force on Cyprus

it will pull its troops out of the UN peace-keeping force on Cyprus within three months.

Political sources said the decision reflected government de-termination to crack down on the Irish Republican Army.

The announcement said Irish participation in the Cyprus force will continue three months but "at a reduced level." Then, the entire 391-man Irish contingent will be withdrawn.

The decision was taken despite pleas from the United Nations that the force should remain on Cyprus to help maintain peace hetween Greeks and Turks for at least six months from the authorized expiry date of Dec. 26.

The Irish government said the Cyprus withdrawal would make more troops available for service at homo, "thus reducing the heavy burden of duty falling on existing

Troops on Border

Political sources said the extra troops will be used to strengthen security along the republic's border with British-governed Northern Ireland and at key installations in the republic.

They said this was in line with Premier Jack Lynch's declaration last Friday that the IRA would not be allowed to use the re-public as a base for its campaign of violence to unite the mostly Protestant north with the mostly Roman Catholic south.

At present, according to army sources, the republic has only about 300 troops deployed along the border—roughly one man per

Commons Votes A Pay Raise for Queen, 166-45

LONDON, Dec. 22 (AP) .- The House of Commons voted by 166-45 last night to approve Queen

Elizabeth's big pay increase. The queen's allowance will rise from £475.000 a year to £980,000. It is her first raise since she came to the throne in 1952. From these monies, she runs Buckingham Palace and other royal residences and carries out official enter-

All 45 MPs who opposed the raise were Laborites or members of smaller opposition parties. One Laborite voted for the bill, The MPs earlier yesterday voted themselves a 38 percent pay increase, their first since 1964, without a dissenting voice. Most Laborite reluctance to support the royal raise appareotly stemmed from the fact that the queen declined to disclose the size of her private fortune to a committée investigating royal Ilnances. The inquiry was commissioned in January, 1969, Six months earlier, a Labor government had banned the entry of foreign stu-dents of the cult, including its millionaire high priest and founder, Ron Hubbard.

The Minister of Health, Ken-

He said they broke up families and that their "authoritarian prin-ciples and practices are a potential menace" to mental patients. The theology of the cult is highly complex and its literature difficult to comprehend. In practice, it teaches that the mentally disturbed may be able to cure themselves, and it opposes ortho-dox institutions for the mentally ill and all kinds of shock therapy. # Oswald's Effects Worth But $3,000.

U.S. Judge Rules

DALLAS, Dec. 22 (AP).—U.S.

District Court Judge Joe E.

Estes ruled yesterday that the foderal government need pay only $3,000 for presidential assassin Lee Harvey Oswald's personal of-fects, instead of $17,729.

Oswald's widow, the government said, admitted the property was worth only $3,000 before the Nov. 22, 1963, assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

The property includes a diary, family photographs, Oswald's passport and marriage license and a dissertation by him on his life in Russia. It had been valued at $480,000 hy his widow, Mrs. Marina Oswald Porter, because of its "historical value." A federal court appraiser made the $17,729 evaluation.

Judge Estes ruled, however, that "the nation and its people should not be required to pay a bounty for items of evidence upon which the Warren Commission based its report."

The rifle used to kill President Kennedy and the pistol used to kill Patroiman J.D. Tippett were not included in Oswald's estate. Mrs. Oswald sold them to a Denver gun collector for $11,350, but they were later confiscated by the government.

Jazz in Soviet Style Draws Komsomol Youths to Festival

lets breaking on a beach.

Then he reared back and the saxophone exploded with a hard, amplified rock beat, backed up by seven sidemen who sounded like the American jazz-rock group Blood, Sweat and Tears.

It was "avant-garde jazz" night the Udarnik Theater, just across the Moscow River from the Kremlin. And it was spon-sored by the Young Communist League, better known by its shortened name, Komsomol,

But about 2,000 persons, mostly the Udavnik to overflowing all three nights. Other Moscow jazz buffs who hadn't managed to acquire one of the 50-kopeck (55 U.S. cents) tickets milled around outside in the show, asking ticketholders if aged to get in by carrying musicians' instrument cases. Many of the fans inside were armed with portable tape recorders to capture tha sounds of Soviet jazz luminaries, including Mr. Garanyan, alto saxman Alexei Roslov, pianisi Vyacheslav Ganelin and trumpet player Andrei Toymasion Spirituals and Dixieland The first night focused on Negro spirituals and Dixieland and the second on the hig-band sound modeled after American groups of the 1940s. The final evening was devoted to "avant-garde jaza." It featured music much like that of Dave Brubeck and Jerry Mulligan in the 1950s and way-out sounds partly inspired by experimental American musicians such as Charles Llord.

But the Russian musicians gave them distinctly original twists. One of the most enthusiastio iisteners on the last night was John Garvey, director of the University of Illinois jazz band. Mr. Garvey brought his 25-man band to the Soviet Union for a month-long tour in 1969, but was visiting Moscow this time as a tourist.

The commission, a private agency recognized by the United Nations, said it had received reports of "serious obstruction, intimidation and persecution suffered by Argentine lawyers in the exercise of their professional duties."

This situation is aggravated, the commission continued, by a "marked disrespect for proper judicial procedures, the passing of retrospective emergency laws, and increasing direct and indirect interference with human rights."

Toll in Explosion In Paris Suburb Climbs to 13

ARGENTEUIL, France, Dec. 22 (AP).—The death toll in yesterday's apartment-house expiosion here rose to 13 today, officials said, while a tenants' association representative asserted that the blast would not have occurred if the apartment-house owners had listened to the tenants' complaints. Officials at Val-d'Oise regional administrative headquarters said the new victims included a fireman, tenants who died overnight and this morning, and a woman whose death had not been reported because of confusion concerning which hospital admitted her. About 40 victims remain in hospitals, with a dozen in "serious con-dition," the officials said.

The explosion, which firemen initially said was caused by a gas lesk, came after a small fire was reported in the 12-story apartment tower in this suburb northwest of Parks.

François Masson, 27, president of the building's tenant association, charged that if "the owners had listened to us, the explosion never would have happened." "Our association asked the owners many times to install a ventilation system in the stair well and safety lights in the same stairway," he said.

A team of shop stewards keeps the goods flowing upward, from a series of crammed cellars.

Other Days

In spite of the operation's modern pace, the shop has a turn-of-the century look and an unhurried air to go with it. Wine and aperitife are sold at a marble-topped bar where a painted glass sign advertises liter bottles from the days when their lire prices were in one digit instead of three or four. Marco Trimani, who now runs the business that has been in his family for 150 years, has the gracious manner of a man who not only knows his job but likes the work. He speaks expertly of the wines of France and Germany and even those of Russia, Chile and the United States, But the enthusiasm builds, along with the tempo, when he takes up his topic: Italian quality

The field has few more ardent and qualified boosters than the Trimanis. Marco's late father, Paolo, and uncle, Francesco, started the catalogue in 1927. Though limited in space, it is one of the more authoritative handbooks available on Italian Trimani is competitive with Rome's less enterprising wine shops. Red, white and rose vini quotidiani range from 180 lire to 340 lire a liter. Good bottles of Rome's favorite wine, Frascati, sell for less than 500 lire.

At the upper end of the price headed by an 1888 Brunello di Montalcino Biondi-Santi that probably would sell for close to $250.

Nearly all of Italy's more than 100 wines of controlled origin (denominazione di origine controllata or DOC) are available and are almost invariably estate bottled They include Barolos, Barbarescos, Chiantis, Soaves, Orvietos, Marsalas, Asti Spumantes and some treasures of less renown such as Carema from Piedmont, Teroldego from Trentino-Alto Adige, the four Valtellina Superiore reds from Lom-bardy, Taurasi from Campania and Etna from Sicily.

The DOC list is growing but it might never include some of Marco Trimani's fondest choices: wines produced by "artisans" and made available only to their friends, including, of course, the

To single out a few of these wines, among the whites, are a 1967 Piccolit Luigi Valle—the Veneto's answer to Château d'Yquem—that had been selling at about 6,000 lire but is so scarce it now is worth more; a Greco di Gerace Umberto Ceratil, from Calabria, another luscious and rare dessert wine, at 2,300 lire, and a superbly dry 1968 Fiano-Apianum Michele Mastroberardino, from near Naples, at 1,500

Among the reds are a 1964 Venegazzù Conte Loredan-Gasparini, from the Veneto, at 1,280 lire; a 1966 Montegiove Achille Lemmi, from the Orvieto area-with a label hand-lettered by the grower's grandmother-at 980 lire, and a 1966 Florano Alberigo Boncompagni Ludovisi Principe di Venosa, produced on the prince's estate along Rome's Appian Way, at 1,650 lire. If Mr. Trimani were asked to pick a favorite among all those bottles he no doubt would judiclously decline. But in describing Italian wines his most glowing adjectives were reserved for a Torre Ercolana made in the hills of Latium at Anagui by Maestro Luigi Colacicchi. In 1968 there were 1,396 bottles of this rich, full-bodied red and Mr. Trimani got most of them to sell at 1,350 lire. Such highly prized wines as these would be worth a voyage to acquire if Marco Trimani had not already made the trip.

Dining Out in Copenhagen-

Specializing in Atmosphere and Steaks

By Jan Sjöby

COPENHAGEN (IHT).-Good old Terminus is gone and the epicures of Copenhagen weep. In its place—in the same post-World-War-I building—is the new Plaza and the epicures have every reason to wipe their tears.

Old Terminus, kitty-corner from the main entrance of the central railroad station, was the place to settle a business deal or to take a good-looking girl on a first deta. The reputation of the place was solidly solid and, in addition the food was good. Built in 1918, it was quaint, with a quaint bar and an equally quaint dining

The new Plaza is no less quaint, even though the varnish on the wood-paneled walls is barely dry. The bar looks like a London club where one Phiness Fogg may have made a bet some bundred-odd years ago. Distinguished-looking gentlemen alt around in the easy chairs, reading newspapers from all over the world. The barman mixes dry martinis that do not taste like a White Lady. Some 3,500 volumes of Keats, Baudelaire, Goethe, Ten-nyson, Byron and Browning line the walls. Interesting reading, too, is the menu card. The Plaza is primarily a steak house, and the major portion of the bathtowel-sized menu card is devoted to meat from ribs and top of the round, through sirloin steaks and tournedos, rumpsteak and fillet of veal, to kidneys in wine, cream and mustard, and sweetbreads in Chablis There is fish and fowl as well, from wine-posched trout to apri-cot duck. And naturally the herring wagon. No respectable Scan-dinavian restaurant would be considered respectable without an ample collection of herring in various marinades.

The wine list is even more impressive. A glass of red, white or rose may be had for 5 crowns (about 70 cents.) A bottle of 1959 Château Mouton-Rothschild (2d cru according to the 1855 classification system) will run 490 crowns—about $85. In between is a wide selection of Bordeaux, Bourgogne, Beaujolais and Ma-con, Côtes du Rhône and Alsace, as well as such petits crus as Chateau Vaugelas from the Roussillon and Frédéric Barberousse from the Arbois.

The wine cellar is the creation of owner Joergen Toennesen, a buds. An amateur and dilettante in the original sense of the words. Hans Joergen Eriksen, 47, managing director of the Plaza, worked his way up from the dishwash-ing end of the restaurant business picking up journeyman's papers as a cook and waiter in the meanwhile. He has worked in France, England Sweden and Germany Mr. Eriksen, asked to compose an ideal dinner at the Plaza, had to do some thinking. He thought

"I think I'd suggest skipping the hors d'oeuvres. There is a limit to what a man can eat. I'd suggest starting with the coquilles St. Jacques Roger V (scallops in chervil-flavored cream sauce) with a Meursault 1968. Then perhaps a carré d'agneau (roast lamb with herbs from Aveyron) with a, say Clos Fourtet 1969. For dessert, a mystère chaud, (ice cream with caramel, bazelnuts and bot chocolate sauce) with a glass of ice cold white port—Cachucha is a good one."

The dinner suggested by Mr. Eriksen ran $16—high but not shocking, by Scandinavian stan-

The Romans, who imported aneth from Egypt, described it as midway between anise and fennel. They used it as a vegetable, a seasoning, and a medicine. Nobody contradicted the opinion that aneth had aphrodislac qualities until the 16th century, when the Italian naturalist Pierandres Mattiols noted that although the odor of heated aneth seeds would arrest hiccups, it was not advisable to go so far as to burn them, since their ashes dulled eyesight and lulled desire.

Aneth drives out the winds, reduces every ill, And flattens swollen bellies, leaving them cold and still. This was not the only medical power ascribed to aneth. In the Middle Ages, Saint Hildegarde, "the Sibyl of the Rhine," recommended it for nosebleed, head colds and lung diseases. In the course of the ages it was varnted not only as a carminative, but also as a stimulant, as beneficial to the stomach, as good for the kidneys, as an anti-spasmodic, as a weight reducer, as an aid to appetite, as a reducer of fever, as an aid to the production of milk by nursing mothers. Modern medicine agrees with the first five of this list, and Mattiola's observation that it cures hiccups was verified in World War I when the French Army was seized with an epidemic of Aneth dropped out of gastronomy after the collapse of the Roman Empire, but in the 17th century the word appeared again in a recipe for pickles made from cucumbers, cauliflower and anoth, Begging once more the question of what exactly is meant by the word in each case, contemporary uses of what, defying the dictionaries, is called aneth include the following: English pickles are flavored by putting them up in bottles containing aneth leaves. In Italy, the young shoots and stems are esten in salads and the flower-(or seed-) bearing tips season sauces or stews. Not only does southern France use aneth for seasoning, but in the

Mr. Bhutto's New Pakistan

Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, the shrewd politician who has inherited power from the military regime in Islamahad, has prescribed a fundamental overhaul of Pakistan's internal and foreign policies.

Drastic change, long overdue in the Moslem state, has been made mandatory by Pakistan's shattering defeat in the war with India and the Mukti Bahini of East Bengal. The change has to begin with President Bhutto himself.

For eight years, Mr. Bhutto served the military dictatorship which he now condemns and replaces. He has been a vociferous advocate of the policy of confrontation with India, a policy that favored military strength over economic development and which ultimately led to the current disaster. As the leading political figure in West Pakistan, he refused to come to terms with autonomy demands of the elected leaders of East Pakistan earlier this year, a posture that helped precipitate the political crisis that has ended in disaster for the Western wing. He gave vocal support, at least in the early stages, to the harsh military crackdown that sealed the total estrangement of Bangladesh.

Mr. Bhutto has been one of the architects of his nation's present fate. But his ability to shift with the tides of political reality, which some regard as crass political opportunism, could now serve the new president and Pakistan well. For the new realities create opportunities as well as problems for the new leadership.

Bengal's loss, a blow which President Bhutto apparently does not yet fully acknowledge, could be a blessing in disguise. It frees the more prosperous West of the increasing burden of support for the heavily overpopulated, impoverished East. And it gives Mr. Bhutto an opportunity to build promised new democratic institutions in a more viable state, based on far greater geographic, cultural and political unity than existed in the old bifurcated nation that emerged from the chaos of the 1947 partition of the Indian subcontinent. Decisive defeat at the hands of the Indians is a bitter pill to swallow for the Pakistanis, steeped as they are in military tradition. But it could have healthy results if it forces the new leadership to abandon the myth of military invincibility, to come to terms with their Indian neighbors and to shift human and material resources that have been squandered on an excessive military establishment to urgent develop-

President Bhutto indicated in interviews last week that he is painfully aware of the need for change. If he will now employ his vaunted oratorical skills to lead his people toward democracy and peace within the confines of the new Pakistan, he will deserve the American support that President Nixon indicated he would get at their meeting in Washington last Saturday.

The Import Tax Comes Off

Just prior to his meeting with Prime Minister Heath in Bermuda, President Nixon formally announced the lifting of the 10 pereent import surcharge, which had been rightly criticized by foreign governments as an illegal act of protectionism. And in Washington, the Treasury announced the termination of the "buy American" clause in the 7 percent investment tax credit. The two measures had been linked as weapons for forcing other governments to realign their currencies, grant trade concessions to the United States, and assume a larger share of defense burdens.

Even after last weekend's Washington agreement, it had not been entirely clear when the President would lift these protectionist measures. Mr. Nixon's quick action in doing so is therefore welcome additional evidence that he means to restore an atmosphere of cooperation after the past months of tension and hostility. However, this does not mean that the

Nixon administration now considers that the ments have not yet done enough to reduce on all sides in recent months. their own trade barriers against American goods. In the Washington agreement, the United States representatives warned that the President would not ask Congress actu- . ally to devalue the dollar until a satisfactory package of trade concessions had been received. If these were not forthcoming, the United States would refuse to "participate" in the revaluation of currencies, as other governments had insisted.

A failure by the United States to devalue formally in terms of gold might seem meaningless on economic grounds since Washington has no intention of making the dollar convertible into gold. But an American refusal to change the dollar's gold price could have considerable symbolic and political significance—and it might signal the resumption of hostilities between the United States and other countries on monetary and trade issues. This could take many forms, including reimposition of the import surcharge and the "buy American" clause.

Despite such residual threats, Mr. Nixon has now clearly demonstrated his desire to put the trade issue back within a context of monetary and trade disputes are all over. more normal and friendly political relations While the White House apparently regards with America's allies. But rebuilding trust and the military burden-sharing question as mutual confidence will not be the work of a resolved, it maintains that foreign govern- day after the bitter nationalistic outbursts

Remote Dream of Reconciliation

Prior to the war, the government of Indira Gandhi groaned constantly under the burden of the Bengali refugees. But New Delbi shouldered a new and incomparably greater burden without complaint, because it enabled it to break its archenemy Pakistan. Bangladesh became an East Bengali means to an Indian end. It now remains to be seen when the Soviet Union will recognize the new state and how China will react—quite aside from the possibility that Peking's foilowers in East Bengal could very soon come to dominate in a manner unwelcome to either Moscow or New Delhi.

Enmity and hatred, which could at any time set off an even greater conflagration. will doubtless continue to flourish on the subcontinent. The attitudes of India and Pakistan make the hope of a genuine reconciliation little more than a remote dream. -From Neue Zuercher Zeitung (Zurich).

The New UN Secretary-General

In addition to its other difficulties, one notices the United Nations loss of prestige due to its impotence in intervening effectively in most international crises as we saw again just recently in the Indo-Pakistan conflict. Will Mr. Waldheim Ithe new secretary general] know how to climb back up the hill? India-Pakistan War Aftermath

One of the future dangers to be guarded against is that a more fragmented subcontinent could become increasingly a focus for the new triangular international rivalry of Russia, China and America.

A more immediate danger, however, is that the aftermath of the war could be far more devastating in human terms than the war itself. With the disruption of war coming on top of the previous disasters of the cyclone and civil war, there are serious fears of famine and epidemic disease in East Pak-

There is also the fear of reprisal massacres of some two million non-Bengali Muslims. And finally there is need for a rapid repatriation of the several million East Pakistani refugees now in India, whose return home Mrs. Gandhi claimed was the main reason for starting the war.

To help forestall famine, save the lives of those threatened with reprisals, rebuild Bast Pakistan and assist the return of the refugees requires an international aid operation conducted on a scale and with an urgency much greater than anything so far attempted.

-From the Observer (London).

Peace If Not Good Will

By James Reston

WASHINGTON.—Peace this Christmas is something more than a pious hope. It is not assured, and it is certainly not accompanied by much "good will among men," But there are some solid reasons for believing that, while short and vicious wars for limited ends will probably always be with us, we may very well avoid in the last third of the century the wars of the giant nations that convulsed the world in the first and second thirds of the 20th century.

• The main reason is that the United States, the Soviet Union, and China simply have more to lose than to gain by risking general, war, and that nuclear war, which would be almost unavoidable in any conflict between the major powers, is clearly too dangerous to be waged for anything less than the life of any nation.

ance of atomic power in the world, but a new political balance as well, with Europe gaining in unity and strength, and Japan and China establishing new power centers of their own, which are likely to make common cause against any other nation that threatens the security of the civilized world.

• It is no longer necessary for any nuclear power to wage or even threaten war in order to gain access to raw materials or markets essential to maintain a good standard of life for their people. Even on the question of the relative value of currencies, the major financial nations have managed to reach at least a tentative agreement, and while 1972 will be a year of hard bargaining over trade, there is clear evidence that they will be able to agree on regulations at least as effective, and probably more so, as those in effect since the last world war.

This is far from an ideal or even satisfactory foundation for the organization and cooperation of the human family. And it is true that false and even silly optimism contributed mightily to the two unimaginable tragedies of 1914 and 1939, but the recent divisions and pessimism also lead to desperation, so the progress toward accommodation among the major nations, limited and fragile as it may seem, should not be overlooked.

New Flexibility

There is a new flexibility in the world. All the major nations are reappraising their former assumptions and modifying their old ideologies, while denying that they are doing so. In this last year alone, President Nixon's economic and foreign policies have been transformed. Moscow has stopped ranting about the "vengeful fascists" in West Germany, but is easing the tensions over Berlin, negotiating arms control in Vienna and Helsinki, and talking business with the U.S., Germany, and Japan.

Meanwhile, China has come out of isolation, and is now not only taking its place in the United Nations, but is serving there as a powerful spokesman of the underdeveloped countries, who are in danger of being overlooked in this new share-the-wealth arrangement among the giants.

Still, there are great dangers at the end of 1971, and the greatest of these, ironically, centers on the conflict between Israel and the Arab states, even on Jeruzalem, the symbol of man's hope for peace. This will take some careful handling in 1972, if another war is to be avoided, but even in the Middle East, while Moscow and Washington are on opposite sides, and keep jockeying for influence and advantage, they seem to agree on avoiding war at best, or staying out of it at worst.

China vs. Russia

There is another great potential danger, for like the Israeli-Arab conflict, it involves not only geography but philosophy and even theology, and this is the conflict between China and the Soviet Union.

Long before the recent war between India and Pakistan, with the U.S. on one side and the Soviet Union on the other, I asked Couve de Murville, who was then the ambassador of France to the United States-before he became President de Gaulle's foreign minister and prime ministerwhether he thought we would our time. I asked him this because we were at a birthday party and happened to be almost precisely the same age.

No, he said, he didn't think so, but maybe there would be one great war in the last third of the century: between Russia and China over India. It seemed a fantastic suggestion at the time, but after the events of the last few weeks, one wonders in the Even so, at Christmas of 1971. something has to be said for the possibility of peace, even in secular terms. Certainly not in terms of peace or understanding, and "good will" but in terms of the absence of major war. The accommodations of power and the fear of war have given us time to think about what to do. They have not settled anything. but they have given us a chance to talk about the things that unite the nations instead of concentrating on the things that divide them and lead them to war. The question for 1972 is how to use the time that is gained by will use it in America and in the other major nations to get beyond the mere absence of war to a constructive and cooperative peace for the whole human family.

ONDON.-It appears frome, drawn across the Atlantic again in these days of incipient Gent lism in Britain, residual Gauillan in France and venturesome Cist politik in West Germany, but the army of 200,000 Americans in Europe now stands as the only real definition of the Atlantic alliance.

Although the allies do not fear Soviet attack, they fear the pressures for disengagement in the United States and the Soviet political influence that would follow any reduction of the American presents and the second states are the second states and the second states are the second ican presence and influence. They know that they have nothing to put in their place and they are united largely in the effort to hold the Americans as long

Hopes and wishes for American constancy are only exag-gerated by the evidence that the Europeans themselves feel many of military exertion and unable to unite on a common defense effort. Military service is becoming less and less popular in West Germany and Scandinavia, and the British are progressively drawing down their troops in Germany for the force in Northern Ireland

The proportions of military spending will not be increased by the allies and the rising costs of equipment will add further pressure for manpower reductions. It is commonly felt that if the United States reduces its forces. in Europe, even in exchange for Soviet withdrawals, then West Germany will feel compelled to demobilize some of its forces while the smaller countries in the alliance relax their modest. efforts even further.

The Germans feel so little confidence in the alliance that they insist on dealing directly with Washington to arrange their growing payments to offset the

Poor Substitute

They are also unonthusiastic about the incipient talk of nuclear cooperation between the Heath and Pompidou governments: Even in the unlikely event. that it could someday grow into collaboration and win the necessary American technical support, the Germans would see the result as a British-French deterrent, not an allied force, and in no sense a substitute for their dependence on American muclear

It is against that background that the Europeans nervously watch the pressures for troop cuts in the United States Senate, a budget-conscious Pentagon and a dollar-defending Treasury. All see President Nixon's declared readiness to confer with the Soviet Union on mutual reductions in Europe as a device for resisting those pressures and for eventually appearing them by disguising a disadvantageous Westpullback in the language of accommodation.

WASHINGTON.—At the Battle of Agincourt in 1415, Henry V's longbows helped to "stiffen the sinews, summon up the blood," and carry the day against the French. Through the centuries, distance has continued to widen between warriors, until now in our own time proxy war is carried out by sophisticated weapons and by Vietnamization. In the battle for the Ho Chi Minh Trail in 1972, electronie technology and computers many unseen miles away will order American gunships and bombers to deliver what Shakespeare called "the blast of war" against North Vietnamese trucks and porters carrying supplies through the network of jungle trails. Christmas and New Year may bring a temporary respite; later Tet, the lunar New Year, will punctuate the landscape of war with unreal truce. Then the scouting and shooting will continne again. Despite the announcwithdrawals, about 200,000 Americans will be involved as another year of war closes. Aside from the ground troops who depart with televised fanfare, there are the seldom-mentioned 13,000 Navy men on carriers and

Each of these devices has a signature location; its signals are picked up when-ever anyone on the trail walks

Meanwhile, back at the computer, still more sophisticated tasks are performed. Patterns are determined and planes are told where to release their bombloads. These may be "smart bombs," laser or TV-guided, or dumber conventional ones that can still obliterate an area and every living person or animal in it. The "body count" has been replaced by the "truck count," though no official mention is made of occupants or a "truck driver count." The review forecast that the seven leading OECD countries would enjoy real economic growth of 5 1/4 percent in the first half of 1972, rising to as much as 5 1/2 to 6 percent in the latter half of the year.

The seven nations—the United States, Canada, France, West Germany, Italy, Britain and Japan-account for about 85 percent of the output of the entire 23-nation OECD area. The best performance would come from North America, where both the United States and Canada are expected to achieve growth of 6 percent in the first half of the coming year, rising to between 6 and 6 1/2 percent in the second half.

The situation of West Germany and Italy—two nations at present worried by stagnant growth and rising unemployment—also seems likely to improve, while Japan will move nearer its historical growth rate of about 11 percent,

The OECD was also optimistic that the other main trading na-tions would not, as had been widely feared, feel too strongly the deflationary impact of such a large improvement in the U.S. payments position.

-A group of 12 internationally known economists from the United States, Western Europe, Japan and Canada has unanimously recommended a series of major changes in world economic relations covering not only monetary reform but also trade, aid international investment and detense.

The "ad hoc" group, which first planned to tackle the issues in October, agreed upon its recommendations by coincidence just before and during the dramatic interim monetary settlement of the Group of Ten leading industrial nations last weekend.

While welcoming the agreement, the economists were unanimous in concluding that there would be another crisis—both economio and political—unless deeper reforms were sought and negotiated by the United States, the Common Market and Japan.

Tariff Elimination

These were some of the agreed recommendations:

All remaining tariffs on in-dustrial goods should be eliminated over a 10-year period. · A new set of international rules guaranteeing "small and more frequent changes" in currency exchange rates, to eliminate recurrent crises arising from balance of payments deficits and

· A return to a limited form of convertibility for the dollar— not necessarily into gold—but a much-reduced role of the dollar as a world reserve currency. The United States could change its currency exchange rate like other countries, which until the recent

Japan Bank Sees Surplus In Payments

TOKYO, Dec. 22 (AP-DJ).--Japan is expected to have a strong balance of payments surplus in its coming fiscal year despite the recent 16.88 percent upward revoluation of the yen, Fuji Bank said in its year-end conomic report today. Internally, however, businessmen can expect at least nine more months of depressed con-ditions before the economy begins a recovery in the fourth quarter of 1972, the bank said.

It noted that the revaluation did not cause a new situation Japan, as its overall effect on the economy will be about the same as that of the situation prevailing since August, when the U.S. import surcharge was imposed and the yen floated. However, since the effect of revaluation plus wider currency fluctuation bands is greater than anticipated, some Japanese busiases will experience severe conditions, the bank said. Fuji predicted that Japan's economy will show a real rate of 4.3 percent in the six months ending March 31, 1972, compared with a year earlier, a 4.3 percent growth rate in the following six months, and a real growth rate of 8.6 percent in the six months ending March 31, 1873.

This will result in a real growth rate of 6.6 percent in fiscal 1972 ending March 31, 1973, compared with a rate of 4.8 per-cent this fiscal year and 9.5 per-cent in 1970, the bank said.

It forecast that exports in fiscal 1972 will total about $26 billion, up 10.2 percent from a year earlier, and that imports will gain 13.9 percent to $17.7 This should give a trade surplus of $8.3 billion in fiscal 1970. compared with an expected surplus of $8.061 billion this year. Both figures are sharply higher registered in fiscal 1970, a year of relatively strong economic

But It Could Increase Further, Stein Warns

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22 (WF).

Consumer prices rose at an annual rate of 24 percent in November, but the Nixon administration's chief economist cautioned that it is still too early to say whether the government's wage and price controls have per-manently slowed inflation.

Almost all the data for last month's price index was collected before Nov. 14 the date when the three-month wage-prize freeze was lifted and businessmen were allowed to introduce increases under the regulation of the Price Commission

As a result, the December price report could show a bunching of increases adopted by businesses which had wanted to raise prices during the freeze, Herbert Stein, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, told reporters at a briefing today.

"We could get a month or two which is quite high," Mr. Stein said. But he predicted that this balloon effect would quickly disap-pear and that by spring, it (price changes) should be back down again."

In November, the price index rose 0.2 percent to 122.6, meaning that goods and services that cost $100 in 1967 now would sell for $122.60, About half the increase in prices was concentrated among items not covered by the wage-price freeze, primarily fresh fruits and vegetables, which rose 1.9 percent, and real estate and orderly. Trading remained a routine affair most of the day in London. The dollar was quoted at $2.55355 to the pound and finally closed at $2.55375. This was well above the new central rate of $2.6057.

In Zurich, bankers marked the dollar up to 3.8855 francs in early trading, but it eased later to finish the session at 3.8845 francs, or 1.16 percent above the new central rate of 3.840. The U.S. currency finished the

Martin Proposal On NYSE Board May Be Rejected

NEW YORK, Dec. 22 (NYT).— A key proposal in William Mc-Chesney Martin jr.'s report on the securities markets has aroused deep-seated controversy in Wall Street and may be modified by the New York Stock Exchange. Mr. Martin, former chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, recommended that the exchange's governing board be reorganized to remove control from the exchange membership and to reflect the exchange's "quasi-public nature."

He called for a 20-man board that would include 10 members from outside the exchange mem-bership plus a paid, full-time chairman who would have no ties to any member firm. The exchange's present 33-man board has only three public governors. One alternative that has been considered by a high-level committee studying reorganization is said to involve the creation of a 20-member board with only eight from outside the exchange. The committee is supposed to report its recommendations to the full board within 10 days.

Announcement by B.P. Exploration Company (Libya) Limited

Contrary to established principles of international law, the Libyan Government on December 7th, 1971, purported to nationalise the assets in Libya of BP Exploration Company (Libya) Limited in relation to Concession 65 in Libya.

The Company's rights in relation to Concession 65 were acquired on November 10th, 1960, and include the right to explore for and produce oil in the Sarir area of Libya and to export it.

The action which the Libyan Government took on December 7th, 1971, was to adopt a special law purporting to nationalise the rights of the Company under this Concession and to deprive the Company of such of its property as is connected with the Concession.

This Law was publicly stated by the Libyan Government to be motivated by political objectives. In its deliberate and avowed object of harming British interests it was discriminatory and arbitrary, the Company being the only producer of Libyan oil to which the Law is said to apply. As such, it was a clear violation of international law as well as of the contractual obligations of the Libyan Government.

The Company has protested to the Libyan Government against the enactment of the Law and, in accordance with the Concession, has called for arbitration of the dispute arising from the Libyan Government's breaches.

The Company has also reminded the Libyan Government that the Government's wrongful acts are under international law incapable of depriving the Company of its rights under the Agreement.

Accordingly, the attention of all those who may be concerned with these developments, whether as purchasers of oil or otherwise, is drawn to the continuance of the Company's rights. It is the intention of the Company to assert those rights wherever and whenever necessary against those who infringe them.

Now that the Group of 10 has spoken, the Group of Nomura talks about investing ın Japan today.

Perhaps you, as an institutional or individual investor interested in opportunities in Japan, adopted a wait-and-see attitude during the monetary crisis.

Then, last weekend in Washington, the 10 leading industrial nations agreed on a new set of currency exchange rates. A step toward stability. An economic shot in the arm. A "go" signal to consider Japanese securities.

But even as the veil of uncertainty lifts, new questions arise.

"How," you may ask yourself, "will currency revaluation affect the investment picture in Japan?"

Who's more qualified to answer than Nomura Securities, Japan's largest investment banker!

A changing investment climate

Nomura foresees the dawning of a new age of prosperity with bright investment prospects on the horizon.

Because in the redirection of Japan's economy, the past emphasis on capital spending by industry will give way to an investment boom in the public sector.

It's not an export-oriented economy turning inward. It's not solely a reaction to external economic influences.

The plain truth of the matter is that the time has come in Japan's industrial history to divert funds to improved living standardshousing, schools, roads, public sanitation, all the health and welfare facilities a modern Japan needs.

Which industries and which companies will prosper? Nomura knows.

A little background about ourselves

The Group of Nomura is unique.

Nomura Securities is a major underwriter, dealer and broker for all kinds of securities, including government bonds, corporate bonds, common shares and our own investment trusts.

A member of all Japanese stock exchanges, Nomura does a volume of transactions that amounts to about 16% of the total turnover. We underwrite approximately 30% of Japan's equity and debt issues.

Nomura believes research is the single most important key to sound investing. So we established the Nomura Research Institute —the largest, most diversified, most experienced research organization in all of Japan—to provide our representatives and their clients with investment research.

Nomura Securities pioneered in the use of the computer in financial operations. Today, our system is so sophisticated that we handle a current average of 50 million brokerage transactions each day—without back-office

The size of our real estate subsidiary makes us Japan's fourth largest realtor.

Japan is nearer than you think

If you've been reluctant to look into Japanese investments until the finance ministers reached an agreement, hesitate no longer.

The Group of 10 has done its work. Currencies have been realigned.

Whatever your questions about investing in Japan today, put them to one of our representatives. Even if you're halfway around the world from Tokyo.

Nomura Securities has offices in London, Amsterdam, Frankfurt and -through subsidiaries - in New York, Los Angeles, Honolulu, Hong Kong and Bangkok.

It is sometimes argued that great players lose a little of their alertness if they leave the tournament arena for a time. Such temporary retirements do not seem to affect Italian Blue team member Pleiro Porquet, whose infrequent appearances show that he can still play like a world champion. On the diagramed deal, played in Switzerland last month, Forquet defily negotiated a difficult part-score contract.

The one-club opening bid was strong and artificial, and the rebid of one no-trump following his partner's negative response promised 18 to 19 high-card points. North used two diamonds, a variety of Stayman, and pushed ambitiously to three spades, but South would not go higher.

THE MIDNIGHT SPECIAL A Legend of Leadbelly

By Richard M. Garvin and Edmond G. Addeo. Bernard Gels Associates, 312 pp. $635.

fawning, he was a pronfi, almost strogant man, "the king of the twelve-string guitar," as he told Alan and John Loman in the summer of 1933 in Louisiana's Angola Penitentiary—where he was serving a 6-to-10-year sentence for assault to murder. They listened to him play and agreed. Before long, many others conteded that, true to his hoast, he was about the best country himes singer of all time.

He bragged that his music softened the "stone-cold" hearts of prison wardens and two Southern governors—Pat Nert of Terns and OK. Allen of Louisians—and got him released. Tall, handsome and very black, with snow—white hair, Leadbelly was the perfect figure for a legend to grow up around—a legend he did as much as anyone to cultivate. No one could talk about Leadbelly better than Leadbelly. He was accustomed to introducing many of his songs with a long story about his past. It must be said at once that the book has genre trouble: it is more successful if read as straight biography. The authors seem unwilling to take the kind of liberties with history that, for example, William Siyron was so severely criticized for taking in his novelization of a true-life story, "The Confessions of Nat Turner," The label is still unfortunate, after all, a writer must take liberties, if he is to make good fiction out of history. # Hugh Fullerton Retires From American Hospital

PARIS (IHT). — This Christmas the American Hospital in Neuilly will as usual be trying to cheer its patients with special meals, elaborately decorated halls, and caroling nurses. But this season's holi-days will also be a little sad: Hugh S. Fullerton, the hospital's much-loved executive governor since 1951, will retire with the old

As he walks down the hospital's corridors, pink-cheeked, white-haired and dis-tinguished in a dark suit, he is often stopped by hathrobed patients who mistake him for a doctor and ask for medical advice. His specialties are head colds and stomachaches. "I'm also good at hepatitis," he says. "Just stay in bed and eat lightly. There's nothing a doctor can do."

and studied literature at Wittenberg University, Oxford and Columbia. He took an MA at Princeton and taught English and Spanish at Urbana University.

He cerved in the U.S. Army in 1917-18 and was stationed in Paris. He did not at that time even know of the American Hospital though soldiers going to the front often carried cards asking to he sent there in case they were hit. He has still never been a patient at the hospital—"though that will come, I guess."

Air. Pullerton joined the foreign service in 1920, serving in 13 different posts, the first of them Geneva, where he arrived in August with all his winter clothes. "I started off in a hig way and slumped off." is his inaccurate summary of his diplomatic service which took him from Spain to Lithuania where he met his Latvian wife.

Much of his career was spent in France, however, not only at the Paris Embassy but also as consul in Lyons and Marseilles. It was in Marseilles early in the war that Hugh Fullerton committed an illegal act that helped Jean Moulin to become a great resistance hero.

Moulin, who had escaped from the Germans, arrived in Mr. Fullerton's office with the name of Mercier, an introduction from the Polish consul, and a request for a U.S. visa. Mr. Fullerton hid him and gave him the visa, though he knew perfectly well that, instead of going to America, Moulin would use it to get to Spain and Portugal and, eventually, to De Gaulle Retired from the foreign service Mr. Fullerton and his wife settled in Maryland -for less than a year. "I got bored." Mr. Fullerton says. When the offer came to head the American Hospital, he accepted,

At this moment Mr. Pullerton's office is sadly denuded of decoration except for his ancient Underwood, a fine 1812 Maryland sofa, a souvenir from his previous retirement "that I might give Perry if he acts nice." and several plush and tightly carved wood chairs.

"All this terrible-looking furniture belonged to s Prench lady who died at the age of $3," Mr. Fullerton says. "She left all the money she had, $20,000, and the furniture and this bookcase to the hospital, and the odd thing is that she'd never been a patient here and neither had her husband."

Normally, Mr. Pullerton says, the French are less generous donors than Americans, "The French rarely give because they can't take it off their taxes. But they're very good about paying their bills."

Patients who have been in the American Hospital range from Aimee Semple Mc-Pherson to Maurice Chevalier, and Mr. Fullerton has in his time dealt with almost all nationalities, "But," he adds, "we've never had a Soviet Russian except one who was brought in after an automobile accident. When he learned he was in the American Hospital he was scared stiff."

When the Fullertons leave their house on the hospital grounds, they will live in Nogent-le-Roi near Chartres with their cat and French buildog, and Mr. Fallerton will go fishing and write his memoirs. "You can see why after all these years

I want to star in France," he says gently. "I'd be lonesome any place else."
